

New York makes fun of Detroit for painting her lamp posts green. We like to distinguish lamp posts from tizens.

Haunted Me.
Debt, poverty and suffering haunted me for years, and I was a sick and large bill for doctoring, which did me no good. I was completely discouraged, until one year ago, by the advice of my pastor, I procured Hop Bitters and commenced their use, and in one month we were all well, and none of us have been sick a day since; and I went to say to all poor men, you can keep your families well a year with Hop Bitters for less than one doctor's visit will cost.—A Workman.

Louisiana has passed a law against prize fighting. She may never enforce it, but she didn't want to be behind the times.

What Everybody Wants.
Is a reliable medicine that never does any harm and that prevents and cures disease by keeping the stomach, in order, the bowels regular, and the kidneys and liver active. Such a medicine is Parker's Ginger Tonic. It relieves every case, and has cured thousands. See other column.—Tribune.

A Boston clergyman boasts that he intends to preach until he is 75 years old. You now know where to send your spare stock of sympathy.

the Renembering.
Now that good times are again upon us, it is worth remembering that no one can enjoy the pleasant surroundings if in bad health. There are hundreds of miserable people going about to-day with disordered stomach, liver or kidneys, when a bottle of Parker's Ginger Tonic would do them more good than all the medicines they have ever tried.

Assassins in Ireland must be keener than foxes, or detectives in England must be as stupid as asses. It doesn't cost you anything to take sides.

How to Save.
All hard workers are subject to bilious attacks which may end in dangerous illness. Parker's Ginger Tonic will keep the kidneys and liver active, and by preventing the attack save much sickness, loss of time and expense. Delay at such times means danger.—Detroit Press. See other column.

Electricity and pneumatic tubes are taking the place of cash-carrying in various cities. They don't take back nor hide under the counters to escape calls.

Advertising Cheats.
It has become so common to write the beginning of an elegant, interesting article and then run it into some advertisement that we avoid all such cheats and simply call attention to the merits of Hop Bitters as plain, home-terms as possible, to induce people to give them one trial as on one who knows their value will over use anything else.

Pure old whisky used to be spelled with an "e" before the "y" when adulterating it. They probably knocked out the "e" to let the drugs into the barrel.

A Delightful Novelty.
Ladies prefer Florence Cologne because they find this luscious combination of exquisite perfumes a delightful novelty.

The average life of an e-beery, which puts in an appearance upon the Atlantic coast is only twenty days. It wouldn't pay to fit one up for a beer garden.

A Valuable Addition.
Because it is beneficial to the scalp and adds to personal beauty by restoring color and lustre to gray or faded hair, is why Parker's Hair Balm is such a popular dressing.

The Boston Star will not believe that the popular, beautiful and cheap summer drink has yet been invented. The Boston gazette must be a dry affair.

A sure preventive of fever and ague.
As an antidote against malarial poison, fever and ague, and other intermittent fevers, nothing equals Brown's Iron Bitters. A true tonic! A perfect safeguard!

Dyspepsia is unlearned of its errors, by the use of Bailey's Saline Aperient. It cures dyspepsia, constipation, etc., are cured by its use. All persons it is nauseating pills, its action being so prompt and pleasant.—Century Magazine for August.

Silk gloves are shown in all the new summer shades. They are fastened by three buttons at the wrist and extend upwards in a deep gamut.

One small dose of Bailey's Saline Aperient will immediately cure your head aches, heartburn, sick headache, etc. It is pleasant and charming in taste, and for constipation among all who lead a closely congested life, it is a most admirable remedy. Fifty cents per bottle.

A novelty in parasols consists of a handle finished by a two-inch horse-hoof with a silver ring and nails complete.

The beautiful crimson bluish, the bright sparkling eye, a clear intellect—are so often wanting among our most lovely females, and why? Because they are suffering from some peculiar, lingering female complaint. A sure, safe and effectual remedy, is English Female Bitters.

The fashionable corsage bouquet is a cluster of "Jasques" roses. As many as thirteen are worn at the same time.

English Female Bitters checks red blood in a sickly woman's cheeks and strength to the muscles by giving an appetite, aiding digestion and building up the system. A sickly woman who used a never-failing female regulator, will be delighted with its prompt action.

Fringes formed of very large pendant roundels are employed to edge the draperies on silk or satin dresses.

Gay-colored granadines will be popular this summer.

The fashionable color of damask tablecloths is that of coffee.

Old fashioned shawls are used for portieres and table covers.

Lace pins have the monogram worked in tiny diamonds and emeralds.

Dick was bred by Black Prince, known as the Winn Jack; he by Darlington Duke; he by Time-cannon; he by Black Hawk; and he by Warrior. Time-cannon's Dam was by Warrior and out of a Mare named George. Dick's Dam was by Henry Clay, Jr., he by Wright's Compromise, of Kentucky. This Dam was by a colt of imported Warrior. He will serve gentlemen, $20 for a Jack colt and $10 for a yearling.

WILLIAM H. PATTERSON,

THORAU AND JOPY BROWN.

The people of his native town remember at least one notable occasion on which Thorau did not skulk, nor walk either. I refer to the 30th of October, 1869, when he made his plea for Captain John Brown, while the hero was on trial in Virginia. He was about the only Northern man who was not a skulker, or who did not hide behind some pretext or other. It was proposed to stop Thorau's mouth, persuade him to keep still and let him go, but he was not to be stopped. He thought there were enough lying low—the ranks were all full there, the ground was covered; and in an address delivered in Concord he glorified the old hero in words that, at this day and in the light of subsequent events, it thrills the blood to read. This instant and unequivocal endorsement of Brown by Thorau, in the face of the most overwhelming public opinion, even among antislavery men, throws a flood of light upon him. For the most part, Thorau's political traits and addresses seem a little petulant and willful, and full of short enlisting one's sympathies, and his carrying his opposition to the State to the point of allowing himself to be put in jail rather than pay a paltry tax, savors a little bit of the grotesque and the melodramatic. But his plea for John Brown, when the whole country was disowning him, abolitionists and all, fully satisfies one's sense of the fitness of things. It does not overshoot the mark. The mark was high, and scornful, and uncompromising in the extreme. It was just the occasion required to show Thorau's metal. "If this man's acts and words do not create a revival, it will be the severest possible satire on the acts and words that do. It is the best news that America has ever heard."

"Think of him—of his rare qualities—such a man as it takes ages to make, and ages to understand—no mock hero, nor the representative of any part. A man such as the sun would rise upon again in this benighted land; to whose making went the costliest material, the finest adamant; sent to be the redeemer of those in captivity; and the only use to which you can put him is to hang him at the end of a rope! Do yourselves the honor to recognize him; he needs none of your respect." It was just such radical qualities as John Brown exhibited, or their analogue and counterpart in other fields, that Thorau coveted and pursued through life; in man, devotion to the severest ideal, friendship founded upon antagonism, or hate, as he preferred to call it; in nature the untamed and untamable, even verging on the savage and pitiless; in literature the heroic—books, not which afford us a covering enjoyment, but in which each thought is of unusual daring; such an idle man cannot read, and a timid one would not be entertained by it. Indeed, Thorau was Brown's spiritual brother, the last and finer flowering of the same plant—the seed sown; he was just as much of a zealot, was just as gritty and unflinching in his way; a man whose brow was set, whose mind was made up, and leading just as forlorn a hope, and as little quailed by the odds.

ROSECRANS AND GARFIELD.

Of course General Rosecrans was interviewed on the Schuckers-Oberly correspondence. This was a part of the Democratic scheme. The wire-pullers in this business evidently supposed, that when the confidential letter, written by Garfield to Chase in 1863, was published some weeks ago that the country would be so startled as to fall to pieces. But as affairs moved much as usual after the publication, Rosecrans was interviewed into new notoriety in an effort to create a sentiment unfavorable or hostile to Garfield. This failing, Mr. Oberly was set up as the man of straw at which the as piring Schuckers should fire off his own interpretation of certain harmless letters written by Garfield to Chase. Mr. Schuckers was evidently loaded to the muzzle, and no one seems to know what became of him after the explosion. But the Democrats with seething hearts turn to Rosecrans, who speaks of Garfield as a spy in his camp, and as an untrue man.

When he said this, Rosecrans had not seen the letters recently published. He based his opinion mainly on Garfield's letter of July 27, and in answer to a question as to Garfield's motive, is reported to have said:

Ambition. He must have thought that if I were removed he would succeed me. He left the Army of the Cumberland, I think, on the 10th of October, ostensibly to take his seat in Congress. He came to Washington, accepted a major general's commission, and remained at the orders of the War Department. He came to the arms of the man he afterward said he had rebuked at Louisville on his way here, and accepted a commission, and held it, after my removal from command, until he saw he stood no chance of being appointed to succeed me, and then he resigned and went to Congress. He did not resign until a day or two after the meeting of Congress. He was an untrue man.

The battle of Chickamauga was fought Sept. 19, 1863. On the 19th of October, General Rosecrans was removed from the command of the army, and General Thomas succeeded to the command by order of the War Department. It was after this that Garfield went North. When he arrived in Washington he had been elected to Congress, and had been appointed Major General. He could not have been plotting against Rosecrans then, because Rosecrans had nothing to do with the Army of the Cumberland. He was not plotting against Thomas, because Lincoln and Stanton both testified as to his friendly efforts in favor of Thomas. But Thomas and Stanton both promised him the command of a corps should he remain in the army. On the other hand, Lincoln, Chase, and Rosecrans urged him to take his seat in the House, and on the 3d of December he resigned his commission as Major General. There had been no question, remember, as to who should be the commander of the Army of the Cumberland for six weeks, settled before Garfield arrived in Washington, as Rosecrans will learn on reference to his own orders and letters. Another point that should not escape Rosecrans is that one of Garfield's first speeches in Congress was in defense of his old commander. It may be the policy of the Chairman of the Democratic committee to forget this, but the sick-at-heart General of that day did not. Will the enterprising Schuckers now publish Chase's letters to Garfield, or Rosecrans' letters to Garfield? If not, possibly some one else will.
